No Ordinary Farm

Loch Lomond Farm was placed high up in the hills of Scotland...

...with views as far as the eye could see!

The farm was owned by Lord and Lady Fitzrovia – or Glenn and Jemima, as the animals on the farm called them. Glenn was a tubby-looking chap with untidy red hair and rosy cheeks. His wife, Jemima, had a pointy nose and was as tiny as a tinker.

They both took huge pride in their farm and took very good care of the farm animals that lived there. However, Glenn and Jemima didn't always see eye to eye – they had different opinions about almost everything!

Glenn and Jemima worked hard looking after the farm animals, which included pigs, ducks, chickens, sheep, horses and even Shetland ponies, who were stabled next to the smelly pigsty.

The leader of the pack was Hamish, a pure-bred, brown and white Shetland pony with an outrageously bushy mane and tail, and an unhealthy liking for mints!

He was mischievous beyond belief, but a most likeable fellow too.
